- 10h30 Panel sessions: Moderator: George Brock, President, World Editors Forum, Editor, The Times (Saturday edition)

Panel 1: Connecting readers to content

Traditionally, publishers by and large understand the readers' interests and react to them correspondingly. Today's electronic age has enhanced this direct relationship between publisher and reader: blogs and reading clubs, to cite two examples, now provide direct feedback from readers, the customers, enabling publishers to tailor better their markets. Is this changing the way they publish, affecting editorial integrity or not?

- Stéphanie Van Duin, Director Business Development, member of the Executive Committee, Hachette Books
- Ronald Schild, CEO, MVB (Marketing und Verlagsservice GmbH), Libreka!
- Jonas Modig, FEP President, member of the Board of Bonnier (Sweden)
- Arnaud de Saint-Simon, Chief Operating Officer, Psychologies magazine

Panel 2: Multiplatform evolution in the newsroom

Today's consumers demand news in different formats and on different platforms: whether paper or digital, short SMS alerts, long analysis on the web; interaction in blogs and so on. The separation of off and online editorial has blurred. This panel discusses how journalists and newspaper publishers have to adapt to the new changing media landscape.

- Andrew Moger, Founder of the News Media Coalition
- Mario Tascón, Director General of contents at PrisaCom (El País)
- Tomasz Jozefacki, Director of Internet Division (Agora)
- Claude Droussent, Directeur des rédactions, l'Equipe
- Francisco Pinto Balsemão, EPC President, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Impresa S.G.P.S

Panel 3: Generating revenues in the digital age

The digital shift has had a tremendous impact on the various business models used by publishers. Now that content can be more easily accessed from everywhere through the Internet, publishers have adapted new revenue streams together with the previous they used offline. Advertising is of course an important revenue factor in the digital world as long as copyright and other rights on digital media.

- Yahoo ad services: Jean-Christophe Conti, Vice-President, Yahoo! Search Marketing, Europe
- Pedro Norton, CEO and Publisher of Impresa Jornais
- Kees Spaan, ENPA Vice-President, President of Nederlandse Dagbladers (NDP - Dutch newspaper publishers' association)
